DESCRIPTION

Bianco Carrara Gioia belongs to the family of marbles quarried in the Apuan Alps. More specifically, it is closely related to the classic Bianco Carrara, yet it features a purer calcitic matrix, capable of providing greater brightness and a more visually homogeneous texture. Its veining, composed mainly of fine filaments of microcrystals and traces of accessory minerals, appears subtle and ethereal. In contrast, the slab may present tiny dark speckles, the natural evidence of mineral inclusions trapped during the crystallization process—imperfections that become part of its material charm. Considered by experts a refined variant of Italy's most renowned marble, Bianco Carrara Gioia is chosen for architectural projects of notable sophistication. It is used in interior flooring, where light can enhance its pure whiteness; in vertical cladding, capable of adding depth to spaces; and in crafted or sculpted furnishing elements, created with an almost artisanal attention to detail.

Applications: claddings, floor tiles, kitchen and bathroom vanity tops
